A Certificate Course In "Soil and water analysis"

Because our college is located in a rural area where agriculture is the primary source of income, the Department of Chemistry has established a certificate course in "Soil and Water Analysis" for students. Because of their financial circumstances, students in rural areas are uninformed of the state of the land and water utilized in agriculture. The productive value of soil is lowered when excessive fertilizers, insecticides, and pesticides are used. The yield productivity suffers as a result of this. The main objectives of the workshop are as under:

. To follow up the actual analysis of soil and water samples for the development of practical skills within the students.

Discuss concerns regarding the course.

To develop effective Methodology for soil and water analysis.

To create a community of learners and produce environment for the students.

The Department of Chemistry has arranged a syllabus framing workshop for the above- mentioned certificate course in order to establish an adequate syllabus for this course. The subject experts were called from other institute as well as our college. The suggestions put forward from discussion are summarized as follows: Syllabi should explain why, what, and how/how well students should learn to collect and analyze the soil and water sample.

In order to accomplish so, syllabuses must include a meaningful selection and organization of content, as well as clearly identify the subject's major learning objectives and results.

The formulation of content selection and learning outcomes should reflect appropriately the competencies that one wishes to build in students.

Higher-order intellectual abilities and competences, as well as social, emotional, physical, spiritual, and other capacities, should be emphasized.

At the end of the workshop the course coordinator expressed vote of thanks for the participants for the active and productive participation.
